A Promethean Guide to the 2024 Republican Party Platform

Donald Trump chose a Vice-President, J.D. Vance, and wrote a Republican Party Platform, both of which declare war on the old Republican Party of War and Wall Street. It is partly a two-front war, against both the old Republican Party and against the current Democratic Party. But, in reality, it merely clarifies the battle lines of the American People against Washington's cross party establishment.

The new platform begins with a dedication: To the Forgotten Men and Women of America. The most important sentence in the short document reads, The Republican Party must return to its roots as the Party of Industry, Manufacturing, Infrastructure, and Workers.

What does this mean? Since the founding of our Republic, the enduring conflict has been between an imperial system, whether called the British Empire or oligarchy or globalism, and the American System of Benjamin Franklin, George Washington, Alexander Hamilton and Abraham Lincoln. The British System is based on monetary control and perpetual warfare, both military and psychological. The American System is based on fostering institutions and policies which will unleash the creative potential of the human mind to increase man's power over nature. It is that same conception which guided our choice of the name Promethean for our movement.

The natural political base of the American System comes from producers, the entrepreneurs and workers engaged in Industry, Manufacturing, Infrastructure, and similar endeavors as the new platform states. The political base of the Imperial System is Central Banks, financial parasites, the military and information war machine and their victims—namely those who have been convinced to believe that their survival depends on conforming to the imperial system.

The imperial oligarchy uses divide and conquer, pitting elements of the natural base of the American System against each other. They create artificial "factions" and controlled political parties, which is what George Washington warned against in his Farewell Address.

Abraham Lincoln outflanked this by creating a Republican Party based on Industry, Manufacturing, Infrastructure, and Workers, and, of course, farmers and minorities. Donald Trump is reviving that political movement. He has an acute consciousness of the old, artificial divisions. That's why Teamster's President, Sean O'Brien gave a rousing defense of trade unions at the Republican National Convention on Trump's explicit invitation.

Donald Trump's choice of J.D. Vance underscores his commitment to a NEW Republican Party and it has sent shock waves through the old Republican Party. For example, a Wall Street Journal contributor posting on X responded to Vance's declaration that, "We're done catering to Wall Street." with "WTF is the point of this party? We like Wall Street." The platform is a testament to the idea that increasing production and driving up living standards are fundamental to solving most of our problems.

J.D. Vance expresses core elements of the platform, when he says that both illegal immigration and free trade are pushing down American wages. What is needed are policies which will produce "more revenue, yes, from tariffs, but from more people being in the labor force, from higher productivity growth, from higher wages."

Donald Trump understands that such high productivity growth will be driven by scientific and technological advance. His recent praise of Elon Musk's accomplishments with SpaceX reflects that, as does the platform's commitment to "create a robust Manufacturing Industry in Near Earth Orbit, send American Astronauts back to the Moon, and onward to Mars, and enhance partnerships with the rapidly expanding Commercial Space sector to revolutionize our ability to access, live in, and develop assets in Space."

In truth, Donald Trump, J.D. Vance and the platform are introducing a new economic and political language. It is time for you to learn it and teach it to others. Start with the 20 promises outlined at the beginning of the platform.
